MIGUEL RAMIREZ

"I can't really say 'yay' or 'nay'
because I think there need to be more studies done."

ALEXIS HOWELL

Arguing the borough's grid is struggling, she said

"I would hate to see us dump
a data center on top of that."

SEAT E • TO ALASKA'S NEWS SOURCE

NICK LAJINESS • INCUMBENT

"I don't think that data centers are good for any community, to be honest with you."

SHELLY SHUPE

"I'm somewhere in between the 'I'm worried about what it might bring' and 'I don't want to discount it' groups."

NEXT • SEAT H • THE PRESIDING OFFICER

SEAT H • TO ALASKA'S NEWS SOURCE

SCOTT CRASS • INCUMBENT, PRESIDING OFFICER

Defending his vote, he said

"thinking about a project that would consume more energy than our entire town is absolutely terrifying at first blush."

JOSHUA LEADERS

Backing a temporary moratorium
while data is collected, he said

"We need to take a serious look at the impact on the infrastructure, the power grid, the water and how that's affected."

NEXT • THE LAND ON OFFER

THE AIR FORCE OFFER • AFCEC-26-R-0006

About 4,700 acres, twelve parcels, three installations.

The Air Force wants private AI data centers at JBER, Eielson and Clear.

97,083

people in the borough, 2025 estimate.

Nine Assembly members, every one elected at large.

AFTER TUESDAY

Tuesday picks three of nine voices.

AIR FORCE

Holds the land offer. No award as of mid-September.

STATE AND FEDERAL LISTS

Carry the moratorium request, the only item on both, one of 25 priorities.

ASSEMBLY

Adopted that list 6-1, per Alaska's News Source. Meets October 8th and 22nd.

Polls close at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Power, water, noise, air. Which should the borough press first?
