

AN UPDATE TO THE AUGUST 1ST DECK
ALASKA VOTER LIST

01 / 09

More than 600
were citizens.
About 1,900
never answered.

The correction only found the people who wrote back.

Two published totals. Four reported outcomes.

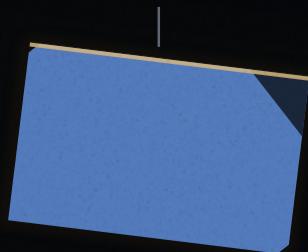

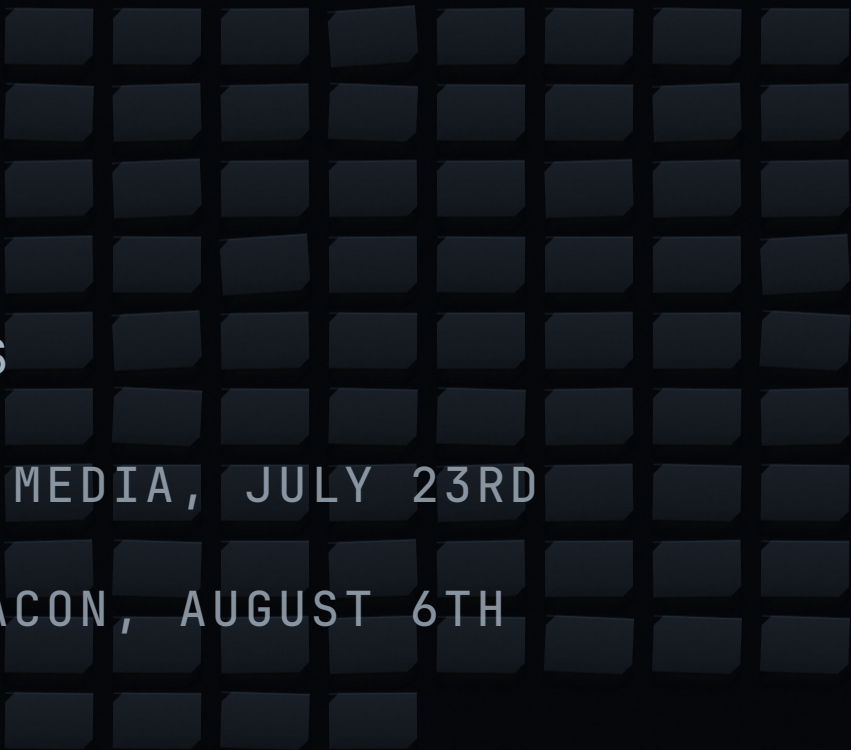

About 685 people contacted the Division to say they are citizens. More than 600 of them were. More than 100 said they are not and asked to be cancelled. About 350 letters came back undeliverable.

About 685 said so. More than 600 were confirmed.

Those are different numbers. No published account describes what happened to the gap between them.

ABOUT 85, STATUS NOT DESCRIBED

More than 100 people reported they are not citizens and asked to be cancelled.

ABOUT

1,900

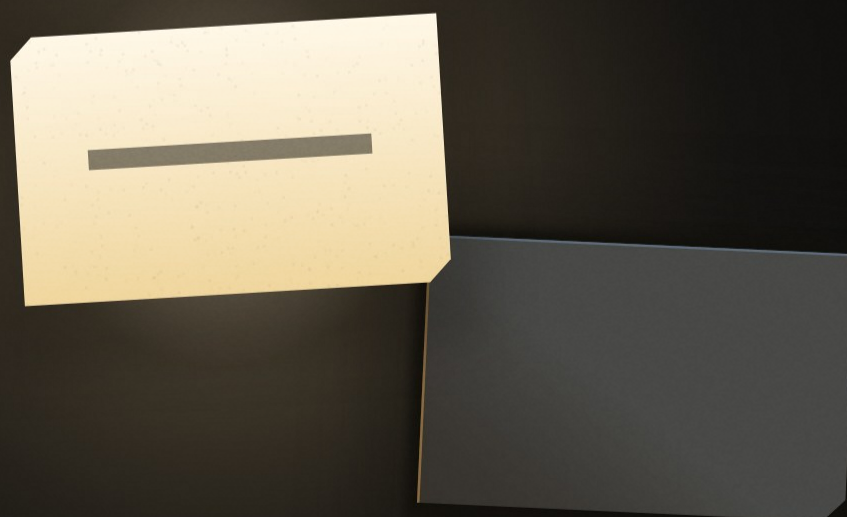

About 1,900 of the affected Alaskans have not responded at all. The only instrument that finds a citizen in this group is a reply. No public record says how many of them are citizens, because nothing in the process asked again.

62.8 PERCENT OF THE DRAWN FIELD

No page in the public record calls this artificial intelligence. One state division asked another to compare two lists of records in March 2026. A mismatch moved a registration off the active voter list.

2,000 records in 2024. More than 580,000 this year.

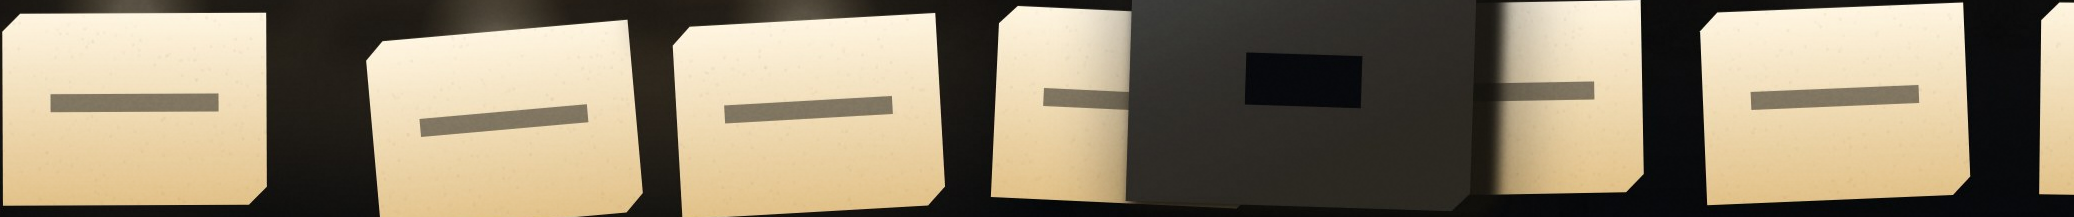

The two divisions compared just 2,000 records in 2024. More than 580,000 were compared this year, a volume the DMV called non-routine, per the Alaska Beacon.

NO BLANKET RESTORATION

A bipartisan group of legislators asked that names go back on the active list unless ineligibility has been established. The director wrote that she won't do that unilaterally. About 350 of the first notices came back undeliverable.

More than 600 were counted. About 1,900 were not.

As of the Division's August 6th letter, no blanket restoration has been ordered.

Send this to one Alaskan who has moved since the last election.
